Note

This book is the result of an ongoing research project into the use, abuse and misuse of state institutions and other organizations under the auspices of the Milošević regime, which seeks to map and document the nomenklatura of that regime. It is complemented by an online database (www.javnidosije.rs) that will be updated regularly as research progresses.

PREFACE

By Dušan Bogdanović,

Chairperson of the Biljana Kovačević-Vučo Fund

More than a decade after Slobodan Milošević stepped down as President of the then Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and, more importantly, as the undisputed leader of all Serbs – in Serbia, Croatia, Bosnia & Herzegovina and Kosovo alike – this society is still struggling to contend with the legacy of the Milošević regime. Slobodan Milošević, the Socialist Party of Serbia (SPS) and their allies were at the head of a complex apparatus of military aggression, internal repression, media propaganda, an instrumentalized judiciary and financial structures, through which policies were pursued that caused immense suffering throughout a disastrous decade and a half of hatred, hostility and war on the territory of the former federated republics of Yugoslavia and, indeed, in Serbia itself. The October 5th 2000 overthrow of Milošević should have marked the beginning of drawing a clear line of discontinuity with those policies and their unequivocal condemnation. However, reflecting upon the direction in which the nation's political and intellectual elites have moved over the past decade, it seems impossible to escape the conclusion that the promise offered by the October 5th uprising has not been fulfilled.

The failure of the DOS¹ coalition government to cleanse the state – primarily the military, security services, police, foreign service, media, judiciary, education system, business elite and financial institutions – of the legions of office holders, functionaries and regime collaborators inherited from Milošević has, since the moment he was ousted, jeopardized Serbia's transition towards an open society based on a functioning system of democratic institutions and the rule of law. Moreover, the vested interests of the vestiges of the regime not to re-open the past and expose its truths has prevented almost all attempts to face the recent past and learn lessons from it. The Commission for Truth and Reconciliation (Komisija za istinu i pomirenje), established in 2002 and chaired by Vojislav Koštunica, then President of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, could and should have been a serious attempt to investigate the abuses of the Milošević regime, but it effectively collapsed in 2003, two years short of its mandate, with no conclusions published. During Mr. Koštunica's² two terms as Prime Minister (2004-2007³ and 2007-2008), it appeared that he made it a top priority to marginalize reformists and reverse the progress made toward democratization during the brief period between October 5th 2000 and Prime Minister Djindjić's assassination on March 12th 2003, allowing many members of Milošević's nomenklatura to re-occupy important posts in state institutions and other national bodies. It is widely accepted that very little has changed since the present government coalition of DS⁴, SPS⁵ and G17+ came into office in 2008. The joint DS/SPS Declaration on Political Reconciliation in 2008, initiated by Boris Tadić – president of both the Republic of Serbia and leader of the Democratic Party – has, by virtue of his decree, consigned the past to the past and rehabilitated the [Post-]Milošević SPS, accepting that party as a fully-fledged democratic partner in Serbian politics and allowing its representatives to occupy key posts in the government, judiciary, public enterprises and other important institutions. It must be said, however, that SPS's apparent aspiration to transform itself into a pro-European "social-democratic" party, led by Ivica Dačić, SPS Chairperson and current Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Interior, does contain elements – albeit restrained and carefully staged – that can be interpreted as the party distancing itself from Milošević's legacy. It remains to be seen how genuine these apparent moves are.

1 DOS: Democratic Opposition of Serbia – a coalition of 18 opposition parties pooled on the eve of the Sep. 2000 presidential election with the aim of ousting Milošević.

The result of this decade of inaction is that, unlike many other ex-communist countries and despite the obvious imperative, Serbia has no tangible instrument of Vergangenheitsbewältigung (confronting one's past with the aim of learning lessons from it and preventing its repetition). No mechanism has been created by the state to expose those who misused their positions within state institutions and other organs during the Milošević regime and no adequate process of lustration, vetting, public disclosure, or, where appropriate, criminal prosecution, has been implemented⁶. It is, therefore, with concern that we observe the experiences of other countries with a similar history to Serbia. It is evident that in countries where society has lost faith in its system of institutions and become accustomed to abuse of power, corruption and impunity extended to state officials, as in Serbia, it is extremely valuable to document and reveal the facts about the past, systematically and without political interference, and to conduct a robust and ongoing public debate about what those facts mean for society in terms of lessons that must be learned. Further, experience elsewhere informs us that this process may be essential in order to rebuild trust in the state, confidence in the future and establish a deep rooted and widespread commitment to liberal-democratic values and the rule of law. It is our firm belief that if a traumatized post-conflict society such as this is incapable or unwilling to face its past and draw lessons from it, it runs a very significant risk of failing to prepare itself for the future and will remain unable to achieve and live by internationally accepted values and standards, remaining on the periphery of a fast changing and increasingly interdependent world. It was with the intention of facilitating the process of reflecting on Serbia's recent past and initiating a broader social debate about it that we embarked on the project that resulted in this book.

More positively, beyond the role of the state and politics, a significant amount of research and analysis by academics, analysts, journalists and other experts has been published, seeking to examine and explain the historical roots and social and political background of the system that led to Milošević's rule, the regime's architecture and its modus operandi. This project builds on this body of knowledge and intends to contribute to its further development. It also seeks to address a recurring problem facing scholars and others studying the Milošević period: the lack of coherent and verified data about the setup of the institutional infrastructure in Serbia during the 1990s and, sometimes more importantly, the people heading those institutions.

It is for all of these reasons – and as a token of recognition of the countless victims of the policies pursued in this part of Europe during the 1990s – that an idea was born to embark on a research effort aimed at mapping the system of state and social institutions that existed under Milošević’s rule and documenting the individuals entrusted with leading them. In this way we believed we could identify the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime (see methodological note, page 17). The result, contained in this book, is a directory of the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime in the period from 1987 to 2000 – from Milošević’s ascent to power at the 8th Session of the Central Committee of the League of Communists of Serbia in September 1987 and his resignation on October 6th 2000. We hope and intend that this endeavor will facilitate future research and analysis substantially and prompt the political community to take a more serious approach to facing the legacy of the past in Serbia.

That this project represents a pioneering endeavor in this part of the world⁷ is significant. If it is to have the impact we intend, it must be entirely accurate. Therefore, particular attention has been paid to the design of methodology to ensure the accuracy of this publication and the accompanying online database. The prevailing view of the editorial team has been that publishing inaccurate data would be more damaging than publishing none; therefore in some cases vital information (date of birth, education details, career development etc.) is absent from the profiles contained in this book⁸. With this in mind, it has been essential to establish clear criteria to identify which persons held the key positions in the spheres of activity controlled by the regime or over which it sought control. Defining where a line can be objectively drawn across hierarchically structured institutions and organizations, above which office holders can be consistently considered to have been key figures in the Milošević regime, reflecting the actual authority and importance of a given office and its office holder, has been one of the most complex problems we faced and has led us to focus on the very highest echelons of state institutions and organizations. No less complex or important has been defining criteria to identify key figures in non-hierarchical spheres of activity, such as culture, the arts, sports and the entertainment business. To give ourselves the best chance of success, the implementation of the project was preceded by consultations with experts from Serbia, Belgium, Czech Republic, Germany and other countries with experience in the field. These sessions established the intellectual framework in which the research would be conducted and the detailed methodology for that research. They also served to clarify the purpose a book such as this could serve – an issue for which there seems to be as many perspectives as there are experts.

7 A two-volume book on the Communist nomenklatura in the former German Democratic Republic was published in 1992 containing a directory of biographies of East German elites following the unification of East and West Germany (Wer war wer in der DDR, Verlag Ch. Links, Berlin, 1992).

8 The editors stand ready to include this information in the online database and add it to further editions of this book, as and when it comes to light.

Implementing this project and making its results available to the public reaches far beyond composing a list of those persons who held key positions within the Milošević regime in order to prevent their names and deeds disappearing unrecorded from our memories. I believe it represents a significant contribution to attempts to assert the right to freedom of access to information and demands for a transparent state – and at this point in time I believe it is a legitimate question to ask what information is of more importance to the public than that which is addressed in this book. Freedom of information is crucial both for facing the past and constructing democratic institutions committed to serving the public interest, particularly in a society such as this one.

In the research process we have consulted far and wide. I am thankful to all of those who have contributed to our efforts. A particular debt of gratitude is owed to two international experts that have participated in our efforts: Prof. Raymond Detrez of the University of Gent, Belgium, and Dr. Jaroslav Šonka, formerly of the European Academy in Berlin and now Director of the European SHOAH Legacy Institute in Prague – whose keen interest and knowledge contributed substantially to our endeavor.

I am also deeply thankful to the team that conceived and conducted the research this book bears the results of, and who pieced it together into the form you see in front of you. I extend my heartfelt thanks and appreciation to Dragan Banjac, Srdjan Barišić, Sonja Biserko, Dr Suzana Blesić, Miša Brkić, Prof. Vladimir Goati, Prof. Miroslav Hadžić, Prof. Žarko Korać, Drago Kovačević, Radovan Kupres, Vigor Majić, Prof. Nikola Samardžić, Prof. Refik Šećibović, and Miloš Vasić, who developed the methodology and editorial guidelines for the research and for this book; and I wish to state my sincere gratitude to our researchers, Milan Bogdanović, Jasmina Knežević, Marko Milošević, Anica Nikolić, Ognjen Piljić, Zoran Radoman, Novak Vučo, and Srdja Vučo, for their relentless efforts, as well as to Milena Bogdanović who made a vital contribution to editing the manuscript.

For the unrelenting excellence of the commitment and ingenuity he has selflessly put in the service of this project, I am compelled to express special thanks to James May, who coordinated the project's implementation.

As I conceived of the idea that led to the production of this book and have overseen the process of its production, it is my honor to state that I bear sole responsibility for any errors printed in these pages.

METHODOLOGICAL NOTE

This book contains a directory of the *nomenklatura*¹ of the Milošević regime: those persons who, with the approval of Slobodan Milošević's inner circle, held the key positions in all spheres of activity controlled by the regime in Serbia and other former Yugoslav republics during the period from 1987 to 2000. This book is complemented by an online database, which contains additional notes from the researchers and editors involved in its production, as well as digital copies of evidence used to verify every position noted in the biographies contained herein. See www.javnidosije.com.

For the purposes of this study we have taken the 8th Session of the Central Committee of the League of Communists of Serbia, held on the 23rd and 24th of September 1987, as the starting point of the Milošević regime and his resignation, on the 6th of October 2000, as its end. The career paths of Slobodan Milošević and others who would go on to become key figures in the Milošević regime before this period and their careers after it are, of course, an issue of exceptional public interest and will be the subject of a future study.

We have taken the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime to encompass a broad but defined group of people: the leadership of what began as the Communist Party of Serbia in 1987 and transformed into the Socialist Party of Serbia (SPS) in 1990; the Republic and Federal Assembly members of the Socialist Party of Serbia and its coalition partners and parties that supported the SPS minority government in 1993-1994: the Yugoslav United Left (JUL), New Democracy (ND), the Serbian Renewal Movement (SPO), the Serbian Radical Party (SRS), and also their sister parties in Croatia and Bosnia & Herzegovina; the executive office holders and key functionaries in civilian state institutions, the military and security apparatus, the media and cultural organizations, and in publicly-owned state controlled businesses, who arbitrated, controlled and directed the coercive power of these institutions and organizations under the auspices of the governing political parties; and the academic, intellectual, cultural and religious figures, and the private businesspersons, who sought to exercise control over the intellectual, cultural, religious and economic life of the country and of Serbs in other former Yugoslav republics under the auspices of the regime and to influence the regime's policies. The research we have conducted, which the directory contained in this book is based upon, has aimed to identify and document these persons.

In defining the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime, we have taken the Socialist Party of Serbia to have been the central pillar and arbiter of power within the regime and the party's adjunct governing coalition partners as having been essential members of it. Membership of the highest echelons of these political parties – the executive and governing party committees – and holding office in government has been used as primary criteria for defining the nomenklatura of the regime and the identities of these persons have been documented and included in this directory en bloc. We have assumed that the use, abuse and misuse of state institutions that occurred under the rule of the Socialist Party of Serbia and their coalition partners renders the executive office holders and key functionaries of these institutions essential members of the nomenklatura of the regime, without whom the instrumentalization of these institutions and organizations in support of the regime, and the implementation of its policies, would not have been possible in the way that it was. Accordingly, the executive office holders (governors, general managers, directors, chiefs of departments, committee presidents, generals, and commanders) in state institutions, organizations and enterprises have been carefully identified and, as much as possible, documented. Similarly, we have assumed that the instrumentalization of the judiciary and the collapse of the rule of law under the Milosevic regime would not have been possible without the complicity of key functionaries –the judges and prosecutors- throughout the judiciary. Court presidents and chief prosecutors of Federal and Republic level courts are included here en bloc, as are Election Commission members. At district and municipal levels, court presidents and chief prosecutors of district and municipal courts in Serbia's principle cities are, as a rule, included. Additionally, judges and prosecutors active in politically motivated cases orchestrated by the regime are included to the extent to which we have been able to document them. We have also assumed that those journalists and cultural and religious figures who actively sought to endorse, promote or justify the policies of the regime were de facto functionaries of it. Accordingly, the positions these individuals held within institutions and organisations are, as much as possible, documented here. Collectively, these individuals are taken to account for the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime.

Our approach has been intentionally conservative, working within the boundaries of facts that are available to us and which we have had the capacity to document and verify. As much as possible, we have used sources of documentary evidence produced directly by the political parties, party/regime controlled media and the state institutions, organizations and enterprises that were under the influence of the regime. In other instances, we have utilized documentary evidence in which persons indict themselves as key proponents of the regime. The result is a directory of the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime constructed from the regime's own documentary record of itself and the persons who saw themselves as embodying it. What has become clear from this process is that a vast amount of information about the Milošević regime and the persons responsible for its policies sits in archives waiting to be documented, organized, analysed and exposed.

Based on these criteria, this book is undoubtedly not an exhaustive record of the nomenklatura of the Milošević regime and is, in parts, incomplete. We have only included persons where we have been able to document evidence of their position within a state institution or organization demonstrably controlled by the regime or directly by members of the regime's inner circle – the political party members and their business partners. Where content is incomplete, it is due to a lack of data and/or evidence to verify the position occupied by a given person. Numerous persons are not included in the directory (at this time) because of a lack of clear information about their political associations. This book is, therefore, not conclusive. It is, however, a beginning, which is what it is intended to be.
